A BRAVE BOY.

About thirty years ago, said Judge F. I. stepped into a book store in Cincinnati in search of some books that I wanted. While there a little ragged boy, not over twelve years of age, came in and inquired for a geography.

'Plenty of them,' said the salesman.

'How much do they cost?' 'One dollar my lad.'

'I did not know they were so much.'

He turned to go out, and even opened the door, but closed it again and came back.

'I have got sixty-one cents,' said he;

'could you let me have a geography, and wait a little while for the rest of the money?'

How eagerly his little bright eyes looked for an answer, and how he seemed to shrink within his ragged clothes when the man, not very kindly, told him he could not. The disappointed little fellow looked up to me with a very poor attempt at a smile, left the store. I followed him and overtook him.

'And what now? I asked.

'Try another place, sir.'

'Shall I go, too, and see how you succeed?'

'Oh, yes, if you like,' said he, inquiringly.

Four different stores I entered with him, and each time he was refused.

'Will you try again?' I asked.

'Yes, sir, I shall try them all, or I should not know whether I could get one.'

We entered the fifth store, and the little fellow walked up manfully and told the man just what he wanted, and how much money he had.

'You want the book very much?' said the proprietor.

'Yes, sir, very much.'

'Why do you want it so very much?'

'To study, sir. I can't go to school, but I study when I am at home. All the boys have got one, and they will all get ahead of me. Besides, my father was a sailor, and I want to learn of the places where he used to go.'

'Does he go to these now?' asked the proprietor.

'Yes, sir, I do.'

'Why do you want it so very much?'

'To study, sir. I can't go to school, but I study when I am at home. All the boys have got one, and they will all get ahead of me. Besides, my father was a sailor, and I want to learn of the places where he used to go.'

'Are you the leaves all in it, and just like the others, not only new?'

'Yes, just like the new ones.'

'It will do just as well, then, and I shall have eleven cents left toward buying some other book. I am glad they did not let me have one at some of the other places.'

'Are you, though?' asked the gentleman, raising his eyebrow curiously.

'Yes, sir; if I live.'

'Well, my lad, I will tell you what I do; I will let you have a new geography, and you may pay me the remainder of the money when you can; or, I will let you have one that is not new for fifty cents.'

'Are the leaves all in it, and just like the others, not only new?'

'Yes, just like the new ones.'

'Are you the leaves all in it, and just like the others, not only new?'

'Yes, just like the new ones.'

'Are you the leaves all in it, and just like the others, not only new?'

'Yes, just like the new ones.'

'Do you want any more books?' I now asked him.

'More than I can ever get,' he replied, glancing at the books that filled the shelves.

I gave him a bank note. 'It will buy some for you,' I said.

Tears of joy came into his eyes.

'Can I buy what I want with it?'

'Yes, my lad, anything.'

Then I will buy a book for mother,' said he. 'I thank you very much, and some day I hope I can pay you back.'

He wanted my name, and I gave it to him. Then I left him standing by the counter so happy that I almost sighed him, and many years passed before I saw him again.

Last year I went to Europe on one of the finest vessels that ever plowed the Atlantic. We had beautiful weather until very near the end of the voyage; then came a most terrible storm, that would have sunk all on board had it not been for the captain. Every spar was laid low, the rudder was almost useless, and a great leak had shown itself, threatening to fill the ship. The crew were all strong, willing men, and the mates were practical seamen of the first class; but after pumping for one whole night and the water still gaining upon them, they gave up in despair, and prepared to take to life boats, though they might have known that no small boat could ride such a sea. The captain, who had been below with blueprints, now came up; he saw how matters stood, and with a voice that I heard distinctly above the roar of the tempest, ordered every man to his post.

I was surprised to see those men how before the strong will of their captain, and hurry back to the pumps. The captain then started below to examine the leak. As he passed me I asked him if there was any hope. He looked at me, and then at other passengers who crowded up to hear the reply, and said, rebukingly:

'Yes, sir; there is hope as long as one inch of this deck remains above water; when I see none of it then I shall abandon the vessel, and not before, nor one of the crew, sir.' everybody must be saved to me at any election under the laws of this State; unless such person shall be restored to the rights of citizenship in a mode prescribed by law.'

Thrice during the day did we despair; but the captain's dauntless courage, perseverance and powerful will mastered every man on board, and we went to work again.

'I will land you safely at the dock in Liverpool,' said he, 'if you will be men; and he did land us safely; but the vessel sank moored to the dock. The captain stood on the deck of the sinking vessel, receiving thanks and blessings of the passengers as they passed down the gang plank. I was the last to leave. As I passed, he grasped my hand and said:

'Judge F.; do you recognize me? I told him I was not aware that I ever saw him until I stepped aboard his ship.'

'Do you remember the boy in Cincinnati?'

'Very well, sir; William Haverly.'

'am he,' said he, 'God bless you!'

'And God bless noble Captain Haverly.'

FROM HEAVEN TO THE CARS OF EARTH. Saturday night, when the report reached the city that armed negroes were marching in force on Edward's depot, a number of citizens armed themselves to go to the rescue. 'Meeting' was then being held in one of the colored churches, and when a colored courier entered the church, in great haste and whispered that the white people were coming with guns, a panic spread through all the congregation.

One old darkey rose up and inquired, 'Is dey got guns?' The courier answered affirmatively.

'Is dey loaded?' he inquired further.

'What's de difference? If dey's got guns dat's nuff for me,' said an athletic negro, as he proceeded to empty himself out of the window.

The minister observing the confusion and seeing that his meeting was virtually broken up, called on one of the deacons to sing the doxology.

'Doxology, hell,' replied the deacon no time for doxology now.'

As he finished the sentence his coat-tail disappeared through the window, and the meeting was bursted up for that night.—Vicksburg Herald.

The following good story on 'Judge Watts, we get from the Roanoke News:

WINNING WAY.—A good story is told on Judge Samuel Watts, of Franklin. The judge is quite a politician, and at one time knew every voter in his district. Time, however, had faded the judge's memory a little, although he will not admit it. He shakes hands with and pretends to know everybody. He was holding court in Halifax county a short time ago, and was approached by a long, tubercular specimen of a countryman, who held out his paw and said:

'How d'ye do, Judge you don't know me, do you?'

'Oh, yes,' said the Judge.

'How is your father?'

'Countryman.—'Oh, he's been dead eleven years.'

Judge.—'Sure enough; but how is your mother?'

Countryman.—'Why she has been dead eighteen years.'

Judge.—'Well, how the devil are you? You ain't dead I know!'

This brought down the crowd, which soon adjourned to Hock Neville's grocery to drink to the live man's health!

Before he came, the woman privately told the warden that she had a bill of divorce from him, and that it might be that he would not care to see her, and she would like to be informed on that point before he came in. Accordingly the warden met the husband in the guard-room, and said to him that his divorced wife was in the office and desired to see him if he was willing. He said he had no objection to seeing her. He went into the office, where she met him with a welcome hand and a smile, which were both very kindly received. During the conversation that ensued she asked him if he intended coming home when his time was out, and told him that his father had said he would establish him in business if he would behave himself. He indefinitely replied that he didn't know or care much where he went to. Her interest in his behalf was not very warmly rekindled, and she finally remarked that she would have to be going. As they parted she offered another census, which he accepted seemingly as a matter of politeness. After he had gone back to work she told the captain of the guard to tell him that if he would be a good man until his time was out and come home she would again join him in the bonds of wedlock.

An Englishman having asked a son of Erin if the roads in Ireland were good received this reply: 'Yes; they are so fine I wonder you do not import some of them into England.' Let me see, there is the road to love, strewed with roses; to matrimony, through nothings; to honor, through the camp; to prison, through the law, and to the undertaker's, through physic.'

'Have you any road to preferment?' asked the Englishman.

'Yes, faith, we have; but that is the dirtiest road in the kingdom.'

The Business Doctor.

A year of depression has gone by and we think we may safely say there is a turn in the tide. Good crops have blessed the farmer, and good crops bring money. The scarcity of currency necessitates low prices, yet as work has been done this year, with the least possible contraction of debt, low prices will be more to the producer than the high prices of the preceding years. Let the farmer take heart, and let the merchant put up his laurels. When the Democratic party gets control of the Government, there is a better day ahead for all of us.

Present and Past.

We pay attention to the advertisement of this Richmond house—the oldest and most reliable in the city. Its acquaintance of many years with the firm justifies the warmest endorsement from me.

The Odd Fellows.

We learn that the effort to open a Lodge here has been attended with success. We have a patriotic regard for this order and will be glad to see it in decent array and in every way in the future.

Bogart.

Within the past week there have been many attempts at burglary. The breakers of Mr. Calvin Parish, Mrs. Roulard, Mr. Edward Crittenden, and one or two others have been invaded. This was fortunate, as Withers being a member of the Convention was obliged to return to his post on Thursday morning; and as he was engaged in almost all of the civil cases of any importance, the civil docket was continued until next term.

Woodson of the "News" was on hand with his tales of circumlocution and by his energy and activity considerably increased the circulation of his valuable Journal.

The bar was well represented by Messrs.

Watt and Withers, J. A. Long, A. E. Henderson, Geo. Thompson, Z. T. Dickey, Col. Wilson, of Carroll, Col. John H. Dillard of Orange, Wm. C. Moore, Col. William C. Grahams, A. Graham of Orange and Col. Thomas Bellin Johnson, Graham and A. W. Graham of Orange.

and consequently the farmer is in good spirits.

We have received a copy of this valuable Almanac published by James H. Emmons Bookseller, Raleigh. It has been enlarged to sixty-four pages, and is full of scientific statistics and other interesting information.

The Almanac now combines an annual State Record which gives the most important statistics of our State during the year, also embracing chronology and meteorology, a valuable addition to its pages in the Legislature.

Summary of much excellence in the future. We extend the right hand of fellowship to it, heartily, and cordially, with all good wishes for success.

Mr. Martin Taylor, Mullin, and Martha Barker has commenced receiving a full set of goods. In her line of business which she invites the attention of the ladies of the neighborhood to she is prepared to give general assistance to all.

Money having been sent by Mrs. Williams, our kind of produce in exchange for work.

The Sentinel, daily, $1.00 per month. Mr. Peter Donan, of Cedar Creek, Va. Bel as its editor. We give him a hearty welcome to the Old North State, and trust that his arrival will add to its strength.

We know that his hand and head are willing.

Health for the Poor.

Our friend and neighbour Mr. David Anderson, has undertaken to engineer and doctor our rugged, and worn highways, and long stages, and, already, the rough and channeled thoroughfares begin to show a more smooth, and inviting appearance. May his benign influence spread over all; and may his shadow never grow less.

The Household Journal, a monthly Journal of Domestic Economy, is occupying table for the first time. It is published by Howard Woodward, No. 73 Main street, New York, and is the best Household companion in the shape of a periodical that we have yet seen. It has four columns of 16 paper, full of useful and interesting matter, well printed, with a good cover, and dirt cheap at $1.00 a year.

Anti-Slavery.

Mrs. Fannie Latte has very kindly bestowed upon us, a sweet potato that measures 16 inches in circumference. She has our sincere thanks, and if any others among our fair lady friends are disposed of exhibiting the brag—potatoes of the highest quality, the door is open, and our hands ready to receive, backed by responsive hearts.

We are truly sorry to learn that unusually night birds, that should be caged in jail, and unusually soundly whipped, invaded her premises, a few nights ago, and stole a large quantity of the above fine vegetables.

CAMPBELL COUNTY, VA.

The fall term of this Court was held last week by Judge Kerr. There were fifty-nine cases on the criminal and about forty on the civil docket. The increase of crime in this good old county, as evidenced by the number of larceny and assault and battery cases, was the subject of serious complaint by many of the citizens of this county. But if the enforcement of the law and infliction of punishment will do any good, we may confidently look for decided improvement during Judge Kerr's term. Some cases of interest disposed of were the following: Wm. W. Smith for stealing an armful of shucks. Snipe is a noted desperado and formerly belonged to the gang of which the notorious Watson boys were members, that for a long time infested the counties of Albemarle, Orange, Person, and Orange. The Watsons are now in the Kentucky penitentiary with their confederate, Alex. Rudin, Judge Kerr, thinking, we suppose, that Stutes would feel remorse in his old age without his former companions of some like character, gave him lodgings in the Republican hotel for ten years. Paul McGehee a "gentleman" of color was sent in the same place for five years for the great fondness for his neighbors monkey wrenches, claimed.

Sydney Ladd, the negro, indicted for killing another at Prospect Hill on election day, was acquitted, upon the plea of self-defense, no guilty plea.

Col. Withers being a member of the Convention was obliged to return to his post on Thursday morning; and as he was engaged in almost all of the civil cases of any importance, the civil docket was continued until next term.

Woodson of the "News" was on hand with his tales of circumlocution and by his energy and activity considerably increased the circulation of his valuable Journal.

WORK FOR THE MONTH.

From the American Farmer.

The gathering of perfected harvests and the committing of seed for future ones to the bosom of the earth will keep the farmer busy enough the present month; but no stress of work ought to be considered as giving an excuse for hasty preparation or careless sowing.

When all pains should be taken to push forward the sowing of this crop, in order that, if possible, the 15th may in this latitude, see the work fully accomplished. When this is not done the fall growth is not made which is necessary to the proper development of the plant to enable it to withstand the winter. Neither does it sufficiently tiller without it, nor gain strength to withstand the attacks of the fly.

But if the force of circumstances forbids early sowing, let nothing interfere with the thorough preparation of the ground. This is paramount importance. A good dressing of some stimulating fertilizer is especially helpful in cases of late sowing, as the plants are enabled by its help to get a start which is very advantageous.

RYE.

This, too, ought to be in as soon as possible. It is far preferable, indeed, to sow August or September; but careful preparation of the land, and some extra fertilizer, especially of a kind that contains considerable nitrogenous matter, may make up for the delay.

BUCKWHEAT.

Ought to be cut before touched by severe frost. When the earliest seed are ripe it is about the right time, and it should be put in small shocks and threshed out as soon as possible. The straw ought to be saved, as it is good forage for stock. A little salt is and improvement and aids in preserving it.

CORN FODDER AND TOPS.

Secure these carefully as soon as possible.

BUTA BAGAS, MANOKLA, &c.

Gather these and store away before frosts injure. Of roots, the first named will stand out much longer than Beets or Carrots, and Parsnips may be allowed to remain all winter in the ground. In digging and hauling endeavor not to bruise the roots as this induces rotting.

PUMPKINS.

Ought to be gathered and stored away in a dry cool place before hurt by frosts.

POTATOES.

Should be dug as soon as practicable, after the vines are dead but never except when the ground is dry.

FALL PLOWING.

Ought to be pushed ahead when practicable, always presuming that the soil is dry enough for the work. All lands, save those of very light texture, are generally conceded to be improved by exposure to the influences of the winter weather; and another advantage is the great destruction it occasions of insects, &c.

LIMING.

This may be attended to with advantage after plowing in the fall, and the crops the ensuing season will show the effects.

DRAINS AND DITCHES.

When the pressure of other work on the farm will permit this is a good time to drain such lands as may need it. Be careful that water furrows are properly laid off in your grain fields and kept clear.

MANURES.

Allow nothing of manorial value to go to waste on the farm. The refuse on and about a place will always more than repay the cost of collecting and composting it. No farmer indeed can afford to neglect the stores of fertilizing materials which are at hand, only waiting to be appropriated. These substances mixed with a fair addition of barn-yard manure, will during a season, make a pile of compost which can scarcely fail to tell on the crops of the farm.

LIVESTOCK.

Fattening Hogs have their quarters so arranged that they may be dry and warm. Put meat and leaves or other absorbents in the bottom of their pens, as soon as they are used up renew them. Feed them first with soft food like apples, pumpkins and roots, mixed if practicable with scalded meal and beans. Increase the quantity of meal gradually. Feed them soft corn as it is husked out. Put up your hogs as early as possible. They fatten quicker and thrive much better. Give at first occasional small doses of flour of sulphur, and keep ashes, rotten wood, and a mixture of lime and salt, within their reach. Beef Cattle ought to be pushed ahead as rapidly as possible. Feed them on old corn meal and once in a while a mess of roots and pumpkins. Give Sheep the best pasture you can afford when they are fattening. Milch Cows need and should have a little extra feed and care as the pastures grow poor. A little hay at night and a moderate mess of meal and bran will be repaid in their yield. Young Stock of every kind ought to begin the winter in good condition, and a little extra care now will prevent their going backwards, when it will be very hard to get them back.

PLANTING ORCHARDS.

Do not neglect this work, the time for which is at hand. Abundant fruit on a farm pays in the long run and in immediate results; in improving the family's health; increasing the variety of salable products from and by enhancing the value of the land. Do the work thoroughly. Buy the trees from reliable nurserymen, a number of whom are advertising in the Farmer, and eschew peddlers and travelling agents.

OLD ORCHARDS.

This is a good time to go over these and cut out dead branches; scrape the moss and lichens from the trunks, and white-wash the stems and main limbs. This process will destroy many insects and their eggs. The wash may have its brightness lessened by an addition of a little lamp-black.

THE SOUTHERN ILLUSTRATED AGE.

RALEIGH, N. C.

THE only Illustrated Weekly in the South. Eight pages. Forty columns. Containing more reading matter than any weekly published in the Southern States.

The first number of the SOUTHERN

ILLUSTRATED AGE will be issued on Saturday, 26th day of June, 1875.

The Publisher intends making it an illustrated record of the times. It will treat of every topic, Political, Historical, Literary and Scientific, which is of current interest, and give the best illustrations that can be obtained, original or foreign.

The Southern Illustrated Age will be printed on new type, and heavy book paper.

On its list of contributors will be found the names of many of the best writers in the South. Serial and short stories, poems and sketches, and well conducted editorial departments, giving the latest personal, literary, scientific, political, religious and commercial intelligence, will furnish every week an amount of reading matter unsurpassed by other papers, in excellence and variety. It is intended to make the Southern Illustrated Age a Journal for the fireside; several columns will be specially devoted to all subjects pertaining to domestic and social life.
